Tjuvstigen (The thief trail)

An old road holds many secrets. Tjuvstigen runs from Norasjön in a northwesterly direction (drawn on the map in the picture next to it which is from the 17th century).

The road/path already existed in ancient times. We know this because there are rune stones along the road, they are our oldest road signs. At Norasjön you can see the Norastone and one kilometer away the Tjuvstigen stones.

The stones are placed on a hilltop, an excellent resting place. It used to be dangerous to travel through the forest and there were plenty of robbers.

However, the name does not at all come from the word thief as we know it today. In Viking times the name was Tjud-stigr. Stigr they then called major roads and the word tjud was another word for people.
